Burglar Caught In Sportsman's Inn At Tinley By Geo. Lorenz

It is not often that a bold, bad burglar is caught in the act and is not shot at. It was mighty lucky for a would-be hold-up artist from Hazlecrest that he was not killed when he broke into the Sportsman's Inn in Tinley Park about five o'clock Friday morning. Members of the George Lorenz family residing upstairs heard the man break in. They aroused Mr. Lorenz, who grabbed a gun and rushed down stairs and saw the burglar standing in the restaurant. At first he was inclined to take a shot at the fellow, but finally decided not to. He put his gun down and asked the burglar what he wanted. He said he wanted a drink and wanted it served at a table in the restaurant. He kept his hand in his hip pocket and Mr. Lorenz thought the man was armed.

Mr. Lorenz served the man with a drink and said he would have to go upstairs for a second. He notified Police Chief Harry Uthe and then returned downstairs and rejoined the burglar at the table. In a few seconds the police officer appeared and quick as a flash he snapped the handcuffs on the much surprised burglar who was hustled off to the village police station. The county police were called and upon investigation found the burglar was a resident of Hazlecrest, had a wife and two children and that his parents also resided there. The family has had a good reputation. The would be bad man had got a few too many drinks under his belt in the early part of the evening and he felt he was either Jessie James or John Dillinger and set out on his short lived life of the hold up man. He had driven to Tinley and his car was found in front of the Sportsman's Inn after his arrest.

The man's wife came to Tinley and pleaded with Mr. Lorenz for leniency for her husband, so Mr. Lorenz did not press the charge.

The case came up before Justice of the Peace, Ray Brennan who fined the would be burglar $5 and costs which was paid and he returned to his wife and family, realizing that crime does not pay.

Watermain Bursts At Tinley Park

A watermain in front of the Peter Wannemacher place in Tinley Park burst Saturday night and a part of the south side of the town was without water until late Sunday afternoon.

Cuts Hand on Broken Milk Bottle

Rudolph Freberg who is connected with the Tinley Park Dairy suffered a painful injury Sunday morning when his hand was gashed by a broken milk bottle while he was engaged in washing bottles. He was given first aid treatment at the office of Dr. R. H. Carmichael.

Mokena Out of Bonded Indebtedness

The residents of the village of Mokena will undoubtedly be pleased to learn that the village is entirely out of its bonded indebtedness, the last bond for street improvement work was paid the last of June.

Mokena has been carrying an incorporate bonded indebtedness since 1898 when the water works system was built. Following the water works project other bond issues were floated in later years for the extension of the water mains, the erection of a new village hall in 1916 and then later for street improvement work.

The taxpayers of the village have been paying on this bonded indebtedness for 35 years.

Geuther Family Re-union Planned

The Second Annual Reunion of the Geuther Family will take place on Sunday, July 22nd at the Frankfort picnic grove on U. S. highway 45, half a mile north of the junction of U. S. Highways 30 and 45. The re-union will continue all day and the guests have been asked to bring lunch for two meals.

Miss Dorothy Scheer, 1245 Glenlake avenue, Chicago is the secretary of the re-union.

Mokena Treasurer Makes Report

The annual report of Otto A. Barrels, village treasurer of Mokena is printed in this issue.

MOKENA GARDEN CLUB OBSERVES 5TH BIRTHDAY

The Mokena Garden Club was organized five years ago on July 9, 1929 at the home of Mrs. Harry Mall. The event was observed with a special program at the meeting of the Club Tuesday afternoon in the home of Mrs. Mall.

Among the features on the program was the arranging of flowers in vases for which first honors went to Mrs. C. Sippel. In a tree guessing contest first honors also went to Mrs. Sippel.

During its five years of existence the club has done much local civic work which has been very commendable.

Death entered the ranks of the club last year and took Mrs. Arthur Hall, one of the officers of the club. The Garden Club members placed a bouquet of flowers on the grave of Mrs. Hall as a tribute to her memory and also drew up the following memorial:

IN MEMORIAM OF

MRS. A. C. HALL

The heaven gates were opened

A loving face said "Come";

Gone from us, oh we miss you,

Loving you dearly your memories will keep.

Neer 'till life ends shall we forget

you,

Dear to our hearts is the grave

where you sleep.

—The Mokena Garden Club.

Several special articles were also read, one by Mrs. Albert Braun on "Tricks the Florist Taught Me";

Mrs. Bartels had a paper on parasites entitled "Debate Between the Duster and Sprayer";

Mrs. J. Walsh read an article on "Hollyhocks";

Two new members, Mrs. Fred Rauch and Mrs. Everett Cooper were enrolled.

The next meeting will be held in the home of Mrs. C. Sippel.

Mokena Church Organization Has 15th Birthday

In 1919 Rev. Walter Kemnitz, then pastor of the Immanuel Lutheran church at Mokena organized a Ladies Aid Society of this church and last Sunday the fifteenth anniversary of this organization was celebrated at the Cappel Grove south of Mokena on Wolf road.

The celebration opened with a divine service. Rev. Mr. Kemnitz, now of Riverdale, gave the principal address.

The Society has 18 members at present. Mrs. John Schilling is the president.

The Ladies Aid Societies of a number of Lutheran churches of the surrounding towns attended the celebration.

About 150 guests in all were present.

Following the services a social time was enjoyed. Lunch was served by the ladies.

Anita Bettenhausen Taken By Death

Anita, eight year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Irving Bettenhausen of Tinley Park, died Thursday morning at five o'clock following a siege of diabetes. She has been in poor health for several years. Last Sunday she passed into a coma and was rushed at once to the Silver Cross hospital in Joliet. She did not come out of the coma.

She is survived by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Irving Bettenhausen of Tinley Park, one brother, Irving, Jr. grandfather, John Bettenhausen of Blue Island and many other relatives and friends.

Funeral services will be held this coming Sunday afternoon from the late home in Tinley Park at 1:30 p. m., to the German M. E. church at 2 p. m. Rev. Charles Hedler officiating. Burial in German M. E. cemetery.

The father and mother have been with the little patient since she has been in the hospital.

Swarming Bees Keep Things Lively

A swarm of bees kept things pretty lively in the vicinity of the Rock Island depot in Mokena Saturday morning. The bees finally lit in a small tree and Harry Schoen, the crossing flagman quickly built a hive and got the entire bee swarm.

Farm Bureau Team Wins Tournament

The Will County Farm Bureau Baseball Club won a three-game baseball tournament at Frankfort, Sunday afternoon before a crowd of 1500 fans. The first game was played between Tinley Park and Peotone in which the former won by a score of 7 to 0. The second game between Mokena and the Farm Bureau, which proved the real thriller, was won by the Bureau nine 3 to 2. This brought Tinley Park and the Farm Bureau clubs together for the final game, which was won by the Bureau Team by a score of 10 to 5. Valetta hurled a one-hit performance for Tinley Park in the opener. Schult and Homerding hooked up in a fine hurling duel, with Schult having the better of the argument, allowing only six scattered hits.

Next Sunday, July 15, the strong Glenview team of Glenview, Illinois will play a double header with the Farm Bureau team at Frankfort, starting at 1 o'clock standard time.

FIRE DESTROYS STAND AT THE ORLAND LAKE

A refreshment stand operated by George Gee along the shores of the Orland Lake, was destroyed by fire Tuesday morning about 8:30 o'clock when a gasoline stove exploded. The Orland Park Fire Department was right on the job, but were handicapped when they were unable to get any water from the village fire plug near the scene of the fire. The village water mains in that section have been shut off for some time, but whether the particular water main on which the fire plug is located was shut off, is not known. The stand and its contents was destroyed by the flames. Among the things that burned was 80 cases of pop.

Mr. Gee got busy at once and has had the stand rebuilt and it will be open for business by Sunday.

Tinley Legion Post Presents Flag To Baseball Team

This Sunday, July 15th the Tinley Park Post No. 615 of the American Legion is presenting a flag to the Tinley Park Baseball Club and will dedicate it with appropriate ceremonies. There will be a parade, led by the Tinley Park band, starting in the south end of town and marching to the ball field at 2 o'clock. The speaker will be George Hime, Commander of LaGrange Post of the American Legion, who will give a short talk at the ball grounds. The band will play a couple of numbers. The baseball game will start at 3 o'clock. The ball Club erected their own flag poles.

The Auxiliary is planning to give a flag too. There are two flag poles and there are two flags. The Auxiliary will take part in the ceremony.

All organizations in town are invited to attend the ceremony and take part in the parade. The public is invited to attend the ceremony at the ball field. No charge. But there is an admission charge for the ball game will start at 3 o'clock.

—Laura Coolidge
The Tinley Park Garden Club met at the home of Mrs. Harry Mager on Wednesday, June 27th with eighteen members present. This was an out door meeting, a lawn party, which everyone enjoyed very much. Also reports of committees were given on the Flower Show.

The Flower Show was a great success due to the untiring efforts of Mrs. W. Funk, her committee, Mrs. Mager and Mrs. Hug, the program chairman, Mrs. Baldwin, and the president, Mrs. J. M. Klepper. We wish to thank Mrs. Nielsen for the luncheon which she gave for the judges, all members who contributed to the luncheon and also Miss Lois Klepper for assisting Mrs. Nielsen.

Our treasurer, Mrs. John Werth, has gone to her cottage at Barron Lake so Mrs. Harry Mager is temporary treasurer.
Orangeade and delicious cake was served by the hostess at the close of the meeting. Next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Bert Fulton, Friday, July 20.

Tinley Woman's Club Enjoys Tea

Mrs. Thurlow Essington entertained the members of the Tinley Park Woman's Club last Friday afternoon, July 6th from 4 to 6 p. m., at a tea in her country home corner 147th and Oak Park Ave. There were thirty ladies present.

After a stroll thru the flower gardens and the museum building where the ladies viewed a splendid private collection of antiques gathered by Attorney Essington, games were progressively played at small tables placed on the porch, the living rooms and on the lawn, which were enjoyed very much.

Iced tea and chocolate were served from the dining room with Mrs. Wallace B. Combs, Third District Garden Chairman and Mrs. Charles Nielsen, president of the club pouring. Served with this were sandwiches, cakes and nuts.

Mrs. Essington proved herself to be a most delightful hostess and all the guests in leaving expressed to her their gratitude for the lovely time enjoyed with her that afternoon.

Girl Thrown Out of Automobile At Orland

Albert Zenke residing on a farm on 108th avenue in Orland township was awakened by the barking of his dogs about 12:30 Saturday morning and upon getting up and investigating the cause of dogs alarm, he saw a young woman standing at the farm house door. She was about twenty years old and pretty. She said: "Please Mister, won't you take me home?"

Mr. Zenke asked the young miss where she was from and how she came to be on a country road at that time of night. She said she lived at 111th and Kedzie. She and a girl friend had gone out for a ride with two strange young men. She was thrown out of the car near the Zenke place and the men and her girl friend went on.

Mr. Zenke called the county cops and escorted the girl to the corner of 108th avenue and 159th street, where the cops met them and took the girl home.

Mokena Pastor Attends Four Fold Wedding Celebration

A most unusual wedding celebration took place in Calumet City, Illinois last Sunday. Mr. and Mrs. Puffi of that city celebrated their golden wedding. The daughter and son in-law of the aged couple Rev. and Mrs. C. T. Wetzstein of Regina, Sask. Canada, celebrated their silver wedding. Another daughter and son in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Flach of Calumet City, celebrated their tenth wedding anniversary. The granddaughter, Miss Margaret Wetzstein of Regina, Sask., was united in marriage with Mr. G. Ernst of the same city.

This fourfold celebration began with a service in the St. John Lutheran Church. A former pastor of that congregation addressed the 50th and 10th anniversary celebrants and the present pastor addressed the 25th anniversary couple. The service closed with the marriage ceremony for the young couple performed by the Rev. C. T. Wetzstein, the father of the bride.

Rev. and Mrs. W. J. Geffert of Mokena were guests at this unusual service. The Rev. Wetzstein held the office of president of the Manitoba Saskatchewan District of the Missouri Synod during the time in which Rev. Mr. Geffert served his former Canadian charge.

Letter Carriers Name Delegates

The Rural Letter Carriers Association of Will and the Southern part of Cook County, held a picnic at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Glen Folkers in Mokena Sunday afternoon, about 75 guests being present.

The following delegates were elected to the Association's state convention to be held at Bellville, Illinois shortly:

John Pennington, Plainfield.
Wm. Mabey, Tinley Park

By virtue of their office the following are also to be representatives:

President, Clarence Demott, Custer Park.

Secretary, Roy McCowan, Minooka

Alternates: Glen Folkers, Mokena, Edward Warning, Frankfort.

Will County Pioneer Day Next Wednesday

Will County Pioneer Day will be celebrated in Joliet on Wednesday, July 18th and promises to be a very gala day. All Joliet merchants are arranging to participate in the celebration. Streets will be gaily decorated. Every window in the loop and adjoining streets will be teeming with old objects gathered from every part of the county to help bring back the past in a concrete way.

Probably every exhibit will be ready for inspection on Monday night and will remain for most of the week. In this exhibit work all can co-operate. Just look for those pioneer things you have stored away and take them to the Joliet National Bank on Monday, July 16, where they will be registered. Have an accompanying slip of paper with your articles stating the approximate age of the object, your name and address and any notes of interest regarding the article. Best of care will be given every article loaned.

A committee will classify the articles and assign the classes to the different stores. Each window decorator in Joliet is planning now to have his exhibit the most original. The committee on exhibits will visit the different stores and award first, second and third ribbons. Maybe your things will win all the honors. Lock them up and plan to help in the celebration which will help honor the noble trail-blazers of our prairie county. It is the hope of the general committee to have this an annual event every year and to make it a bigger and better celebration. Here is the list of classes of exhibits:

Rugs, quilts and coverlets prior to 1866, furniture, household utensils, needlework, china, glassware and pottery, books and documents, ecclesiastical articles, musical instruments, firearms, farm implements, toys and dolls, prints limited to Currier and Ives, lights and lamps, silverware, Indian things, woodenware and timepieces.

News Brevities of Illinois

Torris Johnson, ninety-seven, last of the Civil war veterans in Kendall county, died in Morris.

Jayson Lampley, fifty, a farmer, committed suicide ten miles east of Benton.

Harold St. Clair, confessed slayer of Dr. Homer L. Meyers, killed at his farm south of Eldorado, was returned from New Orleans and lodged in the Saline county jail in Harrisburg.

Granville Davisson Hall, ninety-six years old, former secretary of state of West Virginia and a Presidential elector who cast his vote for Abraham Lincoln at his second election, died in his home at Glencoe.

Mrs. Lydia Umpleby, ninety-seven, known as "Aunt Lydia" to hundreds of central Illinois residents, died at her home at Ohlman where she was a pioneer. She has more than 150 direct descendants in central Illinois.

Acting Superintendent L. M. Taylor of the state highway police issued orders for the arrest of motorists who ignore stop signs.

Jacob C. Thompson, seventy-one, assistant superintendent of public instruction, died at his home in Springfield. For 33 years he had been legal adviser to the superintendent of instruction.

Francis Goodrich, nineteen, recent graduate of Clinton high school, where he was regarded as a student above average, confessed, authorities said, that he had sent extortion letters to Walter S. Gifford, president of the American Telephone and Telegraph company, and to Cornelius Vanderbilt III. Asked his motive, according to Deputy Sheriff Leslie C. Orr, the youth said: "Other people are writing letters demanding money and getting by with it, so why can't I?"

Andrew Gilruth, seventy-four, vice president of the Illinois National bank at Rockford, has retired after 52 years in the real estate and banking fields.

William Wilkerson, eighty-seven, former Duquoin coal miner, now of Desoto, has been presented with the Joseph A. Holmes association award in recognition of his long safety record while engaged in coal mining. Only ten of these awards are made annually. Wilkerson was a miner 75 years without an accident.

While his brother nervously paced the cell in Chester penitentiary where he is serving a 25-year sentence, Warren Little of McLeansboro was electrocuted about 150 yards distant. Little was executed for the slaying of Denver Carleton, McLeansboro barber, in an argument over the price of a haircut. His brother was with him when the argument started and was accused of urging Warren to "let him have it."

Although he has traveled 250,000 miles, ten times the mileage it takes to circle the globe, J. K. McConkey of Stonington, sixty-one, has never been more than ten miles from there. McConkey has just retired as a rural mail carrier, after a service of 32 years. He will receive a monthly pension of $100. "I wore out one buggy, two wagons, two cars, fifteen horses and four automobiles," McConkey said. "I figure I have traveled 250,000 miles, ten times around the world, without ever being more than ten miles from Stonington."

Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, NRA chief, has named the following members of the Illinois regional coal code authority: Northern Illinois district—T. C. Mullins, president Northern Illinois Coal corporation, Chicago; Central Illinois district—G. W. Reed, vice president Peabody Coal company, Chicago; Al Wilcoxson, president Sangamon Coal company, Chicago; C. D. Cowin, president Bell & Zoller Coal company, Chicago; A. B. Buchanan, president Old Ben Coal corporation, Chicago; G. B. Harrington, president Chicago, Wilmington, and Franklin Coal company, Chicago; W. J. Jenkins, president Consolidated Coal company, St. Louis, Mo.; F. H. Woods, president Sahara Coal company, Chicago.

Prolonged drouth conditions have not seriously menaced Illinois cities dependent upon artificial lakes and small streams for their municipal water supplies, according to a preliminary survey completed by the state department of public health's division of sanitary engineering. Based on a study of fifty surface water sources, the summary indicates that only three towns thus far have experienced definite shortages requiring restrictions on the use of water. Harry F. Ferguson, chief sanitary engineer, stated. He added, however, that a continuance of below-normal or even normal rainfall may cause water famine in some localities.

John Ryan, twenty-eight, a licensed pilot of Yates City, and Dr. Thomas R. Plummer, thirty-five, of Farmington, were killed when their plane crashed in a spin and caught fire four miles northeast of Farmington. Doctor Plummer, just learning to fly, was at the controls of the ship, which he and Ryan owned jointly.

Restoration of a full-time station agent by the Wabash railroad at Manville, Livingston county, was ordered by the Illinois Commerce commission. The commission also ordered that the station be maintained as a full-time agency.

That Body of Yours

By
JAMES W. BARTON, M. D.

Eyes and Teeth

A YOUNG man was having his eyes examined by a physician, and to the surprise of physician and patient the eyes had improved considerably since the examination one year previous.

As his work and reading habits had not changed, the physician was at a loss to account for the improvement until he asked some questions.

"You are feeling better physically than you were a year ago, are you not?"

"Yes!" the patient answered, "I feel brighter and more like work, not so lazy as I was a year ago."

"Had any dental work done?"

"Yes, I had an X-ray of my teeth and the dentist found three teeth that were badly infected and removed them. I felt lazier than ever for a few weeks but I feel fine now."

This was the explanation of the improvement in the eyesight.

Dr. William F. C. Steinbugler tells us in the New York State Journal of Medicine that pyorrhea, dental decay, and root infection are frequently causes of eye infection, and, in addition to affecting the eyesight, set up local inflammations in and about the eyes. The most dangerous form of tooth infection is that in which the pulp (nerve and blood vessels) is affected, as this diseased or poisonous material is forced into the blood stream and hence goes to all parts of the body including the eye.

Doctor Steinbugler admits that every effort should be made to preserve the teeth owing to their importance in breaking up food and allowing the digestive juice in the mouth to moisten and soften food, and turn starch into sugar, nevertheless it should be remembered that in doubtful cases the eye should be given first consideration and the removal of infection from the mouth should come before preserving the teeth.

During the war a very skillful pilot began to make poor landings. He was ordered to report for medical examination and it was found that his tonsils were in very bad condition. Removal of tonsils restored his vision to normal and there were no more poor landings. Infection was the cause of the trouble.

If therefore your eyesight seems to be failing or you are troubled with any inflammation about the eyes, a visit to the dentist is advisable before having your glasses changed.

Asthma and Hay Fever

SOMETIMES wonder what hay fever and asthma sufferers must think as they read daily of the wonderful cures being obtained by various physicians throughout the world, and yet despite the various treatments they have received, they still suffer with hay fever and asthma.

What are the various "cures" that are thus recorded?

The cures are first aimed at the causes of these two ailments—sensitivity to certain foods, furs, feathers, pollen of plants, various dusts in the home; ailments or deformities in the nose, throat, or bronchial tubes; acute infections such as influenza, bronchitis, pleurisy, scarlet fever, whooping cough, measles.

Before treatment is undertaken the patient is thoroughly examined and tested by the various substances, now known to be hundreds in number. Treatment is then given according to what the examination and various tests showed.

This treatment consists of various drugs, of which adrenalin stands first; proper attention to diet, rest, and outdoor exercise; vaccines; the surgical removal of adenoids, tonsils, growths, or deformities in nose and throat; the use of pollen extracts before and during the hay fever season.

Dr. T. S. Heaton, Toronto, who made a study of the various causes and different methods of treatment, gives conclusions reached after reviewing some of the work and writings of sixty-six physicians doing research work on hay fever and asthma.

He believes that the treatment of hay fever and asthma by the avoidance of the substances that cause these conditions is the best method at this time. Rooms in which these substances cannot enter and the use of air filters are of great value in fighting these ailments. Avoiding the foods known to cause hay fever or asthma is the best method of treating this particular type. "Certainly asthma and hay fever are difficult to cure. Certainly, too, the special treatment by extracts can help many at any age."

So, if you are an asthma or hay fever sufferer and think you have tried everything, just ponder over these remarks by Doctor Heaton, and try to discover if there is not something you have left undone.

"The Worst People"

In a certain English community the people produced an unusually high grade of woolen cloth. Persecuted and forced to move, they were thenceforward called "the worst people," and their product the "worsted" people's cloth, or plain "worsted."

TO LOVE! TO LIVE!

By R. K. WILKINSON

EVER since she could remember, Edna May had loved Henry Appleton.

Of course at first it wasn't really love. Not the way sophisticated people thought about love.

It had all started with a girlish admiration, a sort of worship.

For Henry was truly a hero to be worshipped.

Even in grammar school he was an outstanding figure in boyish sports.

And later in high school when he began to feel his maturity he was elected captain of the football team, and was prominent in all social activities.

A tall, handsome figure, decidedly masculine, yet finding time to bask in the warmth of the worship Edna May and other girls bestowed upon him.

Afterward, Edna May entered Smith and Henry went to Harvard.

She could only see him occasionally then.

But the newspapers played him up big, predicted he would be the coming gridiron star.

And through it all Edna May's regard wavered not at all.

The girlish feeling of admiration ripened and grew into what must be love.

No other word could explain the thrill she felt when Henry asked her to a sophomore hop.

Edna May remembered that hop vividly.

She went over big, and this seemed to please Henry a lot.

Like all college men he had been afraid of being stuck with a flat tire on his hands. She'd only danced with him twice during the evening.

And after it was over four couples of them went home together in the same automobile, and Henry had left her at the door of the dormitory where she was staying with a hurried good-night and the merest trace of a hand squeeze.

But he must like her, she told herself.

He must, or he wouldn't have asked her to a big event like the sophomore hop, with dozens of other girls willing and eager to go.

On three other occasions during the four years of college she had gone to Cambridge and attended Harvard functions with Henry.

And during her junior year he had been her guest at the prom.

But their relations had never got beyond the brother and sister stage.

That was the trouble.

Henry had always acted more like a brother to her. That sickening "big brother" stuff.

Just because their families were friends and they had been brought up together in the same town, had attended the same public schools, played in the same sand pile.

Henry probably thought, she reflected bitterly, he had a duty to perform. That's why he took her around some—out of respect to the families.

After college Henry came home and went to work in his father's bank, and Edna May lived with her folks and said she'd like to stay home for a while rather than travel in Europe for a year at her mother's suggestion.

But the real reason for it was because she wanted to be near Henry.

Surer than ever she was now that she loved him.

That feeling that had grown and ripened and turned from adoration to admiration and then to respect couldn't be explained any other way.

They saw each other frequently.

They played tennis together and swam and danced at the Country club. But Henry's attitude remained the same—a sort of casual indifference, a brotherly regard.

If he saw that she had developed from a gawky girl into full and appealing maturity, the change failed to interest him.

He talked to her freely about other girls, called her attention to any attractive females who appeared from time to time at the club dances, infuriated her by paying court to the young Mrs. Morgan, whose husband had died of pneumonia two weeks after their marriage.

It angered her to feel this way.

She knew it was useless, hopeless. And because of this knowledge she maintained a careless indifference toward him.

It was only when she seemingly became interested in Bob Somerville that Henry's attitude changed.

"Keep away from him, kid," he advised.

"Bob's a good scout, but he's not for you. He has a trick of getting girls all haired up about him and then leaving 'em flat."

Edna May's head began to whirl. Was this why Henry had never paid any attention to her before? Was it because she had acted goofy about him, never appeared interested in anyone else? Was this the key to his affections?

Thereafter Edna May became more attentive to Bob than ever.

She spent four or five nights a week with him. And when Henry asked her to accompany him to a club dance she informed him sweetly that she had already promised Bob.

And it worked!

Henry grew alarmed. He cautioned her about Somerville again, and received a cold retort to the effect that Edna was now old enough to take care of herself.

The effect upon Henry made her deliciously happy.

He became angry.

At last she was making some impression; at last Henry was beginning to realize she was something besides a kid sister.

She consented once to go out with him, and Henry spent the evening handing her brotherly advice, to all of which she smiled sweetly and looked wise, Henry raged and took her home in sullen silence.

Edna May found difficulty in controlling her emotions.

Henry was waking up.

He was, she was sure, beginning to fall. She could tell.

Every girl can tell when she is making an impression on a man. And the thought made her deliciously happy. Her happiness couldn't be any more complete than on that morning, two days later, when she came to the breakfast table and picked up the early edition of the Reporter that was lying there. She glanced casually at the headlines and flipped the pages to the society section.

Right then her heart stopped beating and the breakfast table and the room and everything began to swim and sway crazily.

At first she couldn't believe her eyes. But she read it again, and then a third time. There couldn't be any mistake. It must be true. And there was Henry's picture and the widow Morgan's. And there were the black headlines staring back at her. "Banker's son elopes with young widow."

Edna May got unsteadily to her feet and somehow reached her room without uttering a sound.

Even then she didn't cry.

Her hurt was too great. She just sat before her window and stared out and saw nothing.

She wished she was dead.

How easy it would be to die now. It would simplify matters so much. It would spare her all the years to come, years of torment and misery.

Edna May suddenly stood up and went into her bathroom and took down a bottle of iodine. . . . Later she opened her eyes and became conscious of a burning sensation in her stomach, and decided she wasn't dead.

Her mother was there, bending over her with anxious eyes.

She wondered why Edna May had taken such a large dose of cough medicine, and Edna May shut her eyes and didn't attempt to explain.

She'd have to try again, she told herself. She couldn't go on. She couldn't.

At noon Edna May got up and dressed and went out for a walk. At the corner of Fisher and Spruce she turned and crossed over to detour around a roped-off area where some construction work was going on.

She remembered hearing the warning cry, but her mind was too occupied to give it much heed. Then she saw the heavy crane swinging toward her, and screamed. Death stared her in the face, and she tried to avoid it.

Death! A few hours before she had sought it. And now she screamed and ran and prayed that it would not claim her. . . .

"It's a pity," the doctor was saying, "she'll be scarred for life . . . such a good-looking girl, too . . . even though they do get damages, it won't do much good . . . damages won't remove that scar. . . ."

Edna May opened her eyes and looked at the doctor and her mother and father, and smiled.

There was pity and sorrow in their faces, but Edna May still smiled.

She reached for her mother's hand and drew her toward the bed. "It can't be as bad as that," she said. "It could be so much worse. I—I'm lucky to be alive."

After a while she thought of Henry and wondered if he was happy with the widow Morgan.

She hoped he was. She wanted every one to be happy. There were so many important things to do.

Life meant so much.

It was so good—so good to just be alive. To feel that you had years and years to live. How foolish she'd been to try to crowd it all into so short a space of time, to have had but a single purpose in mind.

Edna May closed her eyes again, but the smile lingered. She shuddered, remembering how near death she had been. She sighed. Life—just to be alive—was so sweet.

It was selfish to waste life away. . . . So many things far more important and necessary than love.

Edna May at last had found herself.

A Weighty Subject

William Howard Taft, former President of the United States, was a man of big proportions, both mentally and physically. He was also blessed with a keen sense of humor. A Washington newspaper correspondent once asked him if he would tell how much he weighed. "No, sir," boomed the President. "Mr. Reed used to say that no gentleman could weigh more than 200 pounds. I have amended that to 300." Mr. Taft actually weighed more than 300 pounds at one time.

Eskimo Children Lucky

The Eskimo child is in some respects the luckiest child in the world. He is never scolded or whipped and is respected and revered by his parents. This is because the superstition-dominated Eskimo believes that in the child the spirit of its dead grandfather or grandmother lives again. For this reason, it is quite common to hear an Eskimo mother address her child as mother or father.

Poultry

USE SURPLUS MILK TO GROW BROILERS

Weight Is Added Faster and Meat Is Better.

By R. E. Gray, Extension Specialist in Poultry Husbandry, Ohio State University.—WNU Service.

A use for some of the surplus milk on the farm is seen in the practice of milk-fattening broilers. This practice may lead to four possible gains.

Milk-fattened broilers add weight faster than do cockerels on range. Their meat is of better quality, and in some markets the broilers will command a better price because of it. By hastening the maturity of the cockerels for broilers the poultryman can separate them from the pullets sooner, which will result in better laying stock.

Fattening cockerels in feeding batteries leads to best results, and very fine results may be secured by pen-fattening if the pens are darkened between feedings so that the birds exercise less than they do normally.

A good fattening ration may be made of three pounds of yellow corn meal and one pound of wheat flour middlings, mixed with liquid milk to the consistency of a batter that pours readily from a bucket.

If liquid milk is not available, semi-solid buttermilk may be used in place of the skim milk at the rate of 1½ pounds to each gallon of water.

Very little feed should be given the birds the first day a fattening ration is put before them. Let the birds get hungry. Give them as much feed as they can clean up in five minutes the morning of the second day, and in the evening, as much as they will eat in ten minutes.

Not until the third day should the chickens be given full feedings as much as they will eat in 10 to 15 minutes morning, noon, and night. Nothing to drink should be given the chickens. As much liquid as they need is contained in the wet mash.

Early Care of Goslings

Cited by an Authority

Goslings do not need feed until they are from thirty-six to forty-eight hours old, when they should be fed stale bread soaked in milk, or a mash made of four parts corn meal and one part middlings, says an authority in the Missouri Farmer. Green grass should make up most of their feed and only a limited amount of grain should be fed. Plenty of fresh, clean drinking water should be supplied. After two weeks, if the goslings have plenty of grass, they will not need any other feed. In case extra feed is needed a suitable mash can be made of two parts shorts, one part of corn meal or ground oats. After six weeks old, if extra feed is still needed, the mash should be changed to equal parts shorts, corn meal, and ground oats with 5 per cent meat scrap. Where pasture is good, most goslings are raised from the time they are two or three weeks old to fattening time without additional feed. Whole grain should not be fed until the goslings are well feathered. Because of a limited demand, it is doubtful if geese can be profitably raised except where they have good range.

Cutting Range Costs

Next to the feed cost, the greatest expense in brooding and rearing of chicks is in labor. Any poultryman, observes a writer in the Country Gentleman, whose range is not already so equipped can well consider installing certain practical labor-saving devices. A lot of time can be wasted carrying water in pails, so any range on which a considerable number of chicks is reared should be piped for water. Three-quarter-inch pipe for leaders one-half-inch pipe for laterals, with an automatic, self-feeding shut-off near each colony house, will more than pay for the complete cost before the season is half over. To keep the water cool, the pipe should be laid in a furrow which has been plowed up and laid back over the pipe. Once a day the pans can be rinsed with a large bottle brush, which is all the labor required in the watering operation. In the fall the pipes can be taken up and stored till spring comes again.

No Cure for Stunted Chicks

Start a chick in the way he should go—and you will reap the reward, says Miss Cora Cooke, extension specialist in poultry, University farm, St. Paul. Flocks in which some chicks lag behind the rest, carry evidence that something is wrong. Some chicks, unfortunately, are "born runts." There is nothing to do but put them out of their misery. Some of these runts could have been avoided, however, if the parent stock had been selected with care—selected for health, vigor.

Production of Geese

According to the 1930 census, Missouri ranks fourth in the production of geese, says a writer in Missouri Farmer. Geese production in the United States has, since 1910, passed completely from the South Central to the North Central states. This shift is attributed to the fact that geese were formerly produced in the South mainly for the feathers, and that as the demand for feather declined in that section the production of geese was abandoned.

Plaques Come Back to Plague the Decorator

Under the guise of modernistic decoration, the plaque is rearing its ugly head in the American home, says the New York Sun. Can the leopard change its spots? Can the hassock, the patent rocker, the what-not, the marble-top bureau, the tidy, the afghan, the ormolu clock, the portiere, the inside blind, the Rogers group—in short, can the furnishings of Grandfather Whoosis' house be brought back from the dust and made to live harmoniously with tubular steel chairs and right-angled bookcases? It is no more improbable than making the plaque subdue itself to the element of modernism in decoration. Everybody's aunt or great-aunt with a touch of artistic talent produced a plaque; homemade, hand-colored, it hung on a bedroom or living room wall and breathed the spirit of the age as composedly as did the still life over the sideboard in the dining room. One thing or another must happen: The essential nature of the plaque must disappear in the iron mold of modernism, or the arrival of the plaque must be the beginning of corruption in the archaic modernistic.

Little Girl's Face Inflamed by Psoriasis

Healed by Cuticura

"My little girl's face was so inflamed that her eyes were swollen almost shut. The trouble was diagnosed as psoriasis. She scratched night and day and was not able to obtain rest. The scratching aggravated the trouble and each finger tip was red and swollen with infection. She became so emaciated that she was very pathetic looking."

"After three months' suffering I recalled the Cuticura treatment used by my mother. I bought a cake of Cuticura Soap and a box of Cuticura Ointment and used them according to directions. The first treatment brought relief and she is now healed." (Signed) Mrs. Mable I. Johnson, 4720 Ames Ave., Omaha, Neb., March 14, 1934.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted
by William Bruckart

Washington. — Armed with more power than any President of the United States, or the head of any democratic government, ever has had, President Roosevelt has started what he hopes will be the final drive for economic recovery. He has all of the weapons in his own hands. There can be no mistake that he is prepared to use them.

When the second session of the Seventy-third congress adjourned, the work it had done together with the enactments of the first session, completed the transfer to the Chief Executive of more authority than any congress ever before had delegated to the head of the government. In fact, a survey of the acts seems to indicate that congress delegated to Mr. Roosevelt at least 50 per cent of the power ordinarily reserved to the legislative branch alone. Some of the grants were of a temporary character, of course, but nevertheless the President has them and they cannot be taken away until after the first of January, 1935, irrespective of their nature, unless exigencies should arise under which Mr. Roosevelt will call the congress back for an extraordinary session. Those exigencies do not now appear on the horizon.

The above paragraphs are a necessary prelude to the further statement that for the coming six months, at least, the country will have a distinctive one-man control. Ordinarily, we are prone to consider this government of ours in a little different manner because, in a period when congress is in session, the restrictions which its enactments embody serve to circumscribe the powers of the executive branch of the government. In the forthcoming six months, however, the executive branch may operate with all of the freedom discretionary authority carries in the New Deal legislation.

Because of the great speed which characterized passage of the New Deal legislation for which the President asked, its full meaning was overlooked temporarily in many cases. Now that congress has gone, however, appraisals are possible in the light of the relationship existing between various items of the New Deal, and this has occasioned more than the usual amount of discussion in Washington.

One line of discussion frequently heard is that Mr. Roosevelt has placed himself in a spot where he can claim full personal credit for the success of his program. By the same token, and since success is not yet assured, he is on the spot where he must accept full responsibility for failure of any part of the program to accomplish the job which he has outlined. From what I hear around Washington, there seems no disposition anywhere to take away any of the credit. The politicians on the President's side dare not seek any of the credit, for their records show them to have been wholly subservient to his will. Anti-administration politicians are continuing to play dead, for their strategy is apparently one of allowing the calf all of the rope. If failure attends any units of the program, they will make great capital of it. If success is complete, they can do nothing about it anyway, thus they are in a blind alley for the time being.

This position, I am told, does not mean that the Republicans and other anti-administration groups will not fight back. I have explained in earlier letters that they are going to foment trouble by attacks on various of the policies to show vulnerable points.

As I said at the outset, the story of the Seventy-third congress is the story of the broadest loan of power ever given. It must be described as a loan of power, because congress can take it back at any time by mustering sufficient votes for repeal of the laws it enacted. But it must be remembered that, under the so-called Norris amendment to the federal Constitution, the recently adjourned session of congress was the last session. In other words, when adjournment was voted, it was an adjournment sine die. It was finished. It cannot be reconvened without a call by the President and that, as I reported above, is hardly within the realm of possibilities. All of which is by way of saying that Mr. Roosevelt will have the use of these loaned powers completely and unequivocally certainly until next January.

It might be added that he will have most of them for much longer because, although congress can exercise its right to take them back, recovery of the grants of power is not as easy as it may seem. For example, normally, repeal of a law is accomplished by a majority vote in congress. But one must stop to consider here that Mr. Roosevelt may not want to give up the authority vested in him. He has the power to veto an act of congress. Then, to get those powers back congress must override the veto. To override a veto it is necessary under the terms of the Constitution that two-thirds of each house shall have voted in the affirmative.

I am making no assertion that any such attitude will be taken by the President. None can make it for none knows what the President's attitude will be when the time comes for a decision on the point. It is worthy of thought, in my opinion, however, that here is a condition where the system of checks and balances between the legislative, judicial and executive branches of the government have placed a powerful whip in the hands of the Executive. Students of the Constitution tell me that it is a very unusual condition. Frankly, as I see the situation at this time, it will take an overturning of public sentiment equal in magnitude to the landslide by which Mr. Roosevelt was elected to force a return of that power to congress were the President desirous of retaining it.

When Mr. Roosevelt came into office March 4, 1933, the congress, according to the Constitution, held the power to levy and collect taxes, to borrow money, to regulate foreign and domestic commerce, to coin money and regulate its value and to govern its relation to foreign coin, to combat counterfeiting, to set up inferior courts, to declare war and grant letters of marque and reprisal, to raise and support the army and the navy and control calls for the militia, to define and punish piracy, guard the copyright of creative work, and to make all necessary laws for carrying out these various powers.

What has congress retained of these vast powers, given it by the Constitution because it represents the people? There is a divergence of opinion. Surely, however, there has been delegated to the President some of the most important of those powers, and some authorities like Senator Borah of Idaho, and some of the Democratic conservatives claimed the delegation has been illegal. Whether that contention is true, of course, is a matter for the courts.

To examine just a few of the things done by congress will illustrate the extent to which it went in granting authority to the President. Take the laws creating the Agricultural Adjustment administration and it will be seen that the authority to levy and collect taxes was granted and at the same time a big handful of control over interstate and foreign commerce was given to the Executive. Production control under the so-called Bankhead cotton control law is just that. An important control over interstate and foreign commerce was given the President also under the national recovery act. General Johnson, administrator, exercises that authority, of course, but he does so under executive direction.

While the power is circumscribed to an extent, congress gave the President authority to change the value of the dollar. He cannot vary it greater than between fifty and sixty cents, as we used to measure cents, but the power to coin money and regulate its value rests with Mr. Roosevelt to that extent. The implications go much further. The treasury has an immense fund of gold which it can use in maintaining the relationship between our dollar and foreign coins.

Under the present set-up, congress gave away temporarily the right to make laws, or a part of that authority. In nearly all of the acts of the New Deal congress, much discretionary power to draft regulations and rules for administration of the new laws was accorded the Executive. Anti-administration leaders contend that in using this discretionary power, the executive branch has put government into countless businesses. Through the Reconstruction Finance corporation, for example, the government owns or has influence in through the medium of loans such businesses as banking, dairying, cotton and wheat and other grain stocks, in the mortgage field, railroading and in the various fields of commerce and industry such as those touched by the Tennessee Valley experiment.

In the charity field, the government has gone a long way. It is providing work in numerous ways. Various experiments are being worked out with these funds, voted by congress for distribution under the President's direction. Some of the money is being used, for example, for the building of whole towns in conjunction with a government-owned manufacturing plant.

Through NRA, it is to be mentioned also, the anti-trust laws were virtually, if not wholly, suspended. The recovery act made the anti-trust laws inapplicable where corporations signed the codes and complied with the blue eagle requirements. Under that same set of laws, too, the government virtually became a partner in all businesses, since it exercises authority over their manufacturing practices and policies as well as their methods of production and distribution.

Finally, it ought to be mentioned that no longer can an individual sign a contract by which he will agree to make payment in gold. All such contracts entered into heretofore, if they are still in effect, mean nothing because they cannot be enforced as to payment in gold. The treasury has become the owner of all monetary gold within the confines of the United States.

Criminal Often Helped by Laws of Extradition

Extradition law is a tricky thing to handle. At first sight it seems a simple thing. If a citizen of Ruritania flees into Cadonia because he does not wish to be dealt with by the laws of his own country, Ruritania has every right to say to Cadonia, "Hand over our citizen, so that we may investigate these charges against him."

In actual practice it is not so easy. states the Cape Argus. To begin with a refugee can only be delivered up to the officers of the law if the offense charged is also an offense under the code of the country in which he has taken refuge. But these things differ. A man can commit a deed which in Great Britain is punishable, and, by taking refuge in certain foreign countries, be free from anxiety, because it does not figure in the penal code of those countries.

A bank clerk in New York did some clever juggling with the funds under his control and went to London. Hot on his heels went a couple of New York detectives; and application for extradition was made. Unfortunately for his pursuers, his offense was described as "forgery," and in English law it is not so regarded.

Therefore, the English magistrate had no hesitation in refusing the application, and the sleuths from New York went away sorrowful.

Offenses generally regarded in international treaties as extraditable are murder, attempted murder, or manslaughter, also such crimes against the community as arson, bigamy, embezzlement, fraud, counterfeiting and kidnapping. An absconding fraudulent bankrupt may also be pursued and brought back.

But mere wounding, or doing bodily harm to a person, is not extraditable—unless permanent injury or incapacity is caused. So if you beat up your enemy and then flee to Spain or France, or somewhere handy, you are safe from the vengeance of your own country's laws.

It is well known that political offenders are safe from extradition, which is why unsuccessful revolutionaries and plotters against governments spend so much time in exile. But the police of several countries have been wily enough to try to get round this provision.

When they have wanted a political refugee they have brought a criminal charge against him, so as to get him into his own country, where he could be dealt with for his political offense.

This little dodge, though, is defeated by the laws of extradition; for, if required, the police applying for extradition are bound to show that their man is not to be charged with any infraction of the law in connection with the politics of his native country.

On one occasion the police of a certain foreign power were anxious to reclaim a political offender who had fled to London, so they unearthed a trifling robbery of which he had been guilty some years before, and tried to get him extradited on that. But his counsel was able to prove, to the satisfaction of the London magistrate, two important facts.

One was that he had paid back the stolen money, and the other was that a prosecution begun at the time had been dropped. So once again the foreign detectives had to depart without their prey.

But the person whose extradition is sought is further protected by the laws of the hospitable country in which he has sought safety. Apart entirely from politics, he cannot be tried, if extradited to his own land, for any other crime than that specifically charged in the application.

The said application must be accompanied by a warrant granted in the fugitive's own country.

There are one or two other odd points about extradition. Some countries will not deliver up their own citizens. Spain is one of these; so, as an illustration, take the case of a Spaniard who offends against our laws and bolts to his native land.

The Spanish authorities will not give him up to be brought back and tried. Spain's neighbor, Portugal, does not surrender refugees to countries where capital punishment is in force.

Other countries beside Spain who will not surrender their own nationals are Austria, Italy, Germany, Greece, Brazil and Switzerland.—Montreal Family Herald.

Australia Wages War Against Rabbit "Pets"

It is estimated that 1,000,000,000 rabbits infest the state of New South Wales alone. Millions of dollars have been spent in the war against these animals, which were first introduced as pets by early settlers. Fences have been constructed, water holes have been poisoned and professional rabbit catchers have been employed. One fence extends from Condon, on the northwest coast, 1,000 miles south of Hopetoun on the south coast, protecting the entire western portion of the state of western Australia.

Rabbits are particularly destructive in sheep-grazing sections, as they destroy not only grass, but shrubbery as well. Seven rabbits are said to eat as much grass as one sheep. The destructiveness is offset somewhat, however, by their commercial value in fur and food. Exports of rabbit products, chiefly skins, averaged $15,000,000 per year during the years immediately preceding 1929, but since that time have declined.

Welcome American Slang

However rude or crude are American terms, they are so expressive and impudently near the truth that it is hard to resist giving them a place in any honest lexicon, says the Montreal Herald. Such terms are "graft," "onceover," "foolproof" and "step on the gas." This was the explanation given by President George Gordon of Magdalen college, Oxford, England, for their inclusion in the new supplementary. Among other phrases which have been introduced into the English language in the last 50 years and given a place in the dictionary are "all of a doo da," and "give it the once over."

SAFEST TIRE FIRESTONE EVER BUILT

THE New Firestone High Speed Tire for 1934 was built to give you the same dependable service it provided for the 33 drivers who started in the tortuous 500-mile grind at Indianapolis May 30.

This new tire has a wider tread of flatter contour, deeper non-skid, more and tougher rubber, giving you more than 50% longer non-skid mileage.

Besides being Safety Protected on the outside it is Safety Protected on the inside. Eight additional pounds of pure rubber are absorbed by every one hundred pounds of cords. This additional rubber surrounds every cotton fiber inside every cord in every ply. This is accomplished by soaking the cords in liquid rubber by Gum-Dipping, a Firestone patented process.

Heat caused by internal friction of cotton fibers destroys tires—causes separation and blowouts.

Gum-Dipping counteracts friction and heat—provides greater adhesion and strength, assuring car owners of the greatest Safety, Protection and Economy that it is possible for human ingenuity to build into a tire.

Every one of the 33 drivers at Indianapolis chose and bought Firestone High Speed Tires. Race drivers KNOW tire construction—they will not risk their lives or chance of victory on any other than Firestone.

At terrific speeds the cars plunge into the treacherous turns—tires are braced against the scorching brick track—so hot the tires fairly smoke at times—they give—yield and stretch—every conceivable force works to tear the tire to pieces, yet Firestone High Speed Tires "come back" on the straightaways. Not once during the entire race did a tire fail.

Surely this is the most amazing proof ever known of Extra Strength, SAFETY and Dependability. Call on the Firestone Service Dealer or Service Store nearest you TODAY. Equip your car with new Firestone High Speed Tires for 1934.

TRAPPED BY SMOKE, WOMAN
SUMMONS HELP IN TIME

An extension telephone in the home of Jerry B. Fenton, attorney at Springfield, Mo., proved instrumental in saving the life of Mrs. Fenton and their two-year old daughter, Nancy Jane, the other morning.

Fire broke out in the basement of the Fenton home when the furnace became overheated, and Mrs. Fenton and her small daughter were trapped by dense smoke in a second floor bedroom.

The smoke was so dense that she could not see, and breathing was difficult. But there was an extension telephone nearby, to which she made her way and summoned help.

Guard Swiss Passes

Where once the famed St. Bernard dogs were used to rescue travelers through the high passes of the Swiss Alps, prosaic telephones now stand ready to bring assistance. First placed by the Swiss Automobile Club last year, these emergency telephones proved so valuable that their installation is being further extended this year. The telephone shown is on the Furka Road, and contains, like all the others, a list of the telephone numbers of the nearest doctors, police stations, and garages and repair shops.

R. Simmers, was a close runner-up to Walter E. Getala of Chicago, who won the championship trophy at the junior birdmen's model airplane derby Saturday at the Chicago municipal airport. Getala and Simmers won first place in two event and second in the other. In a class of 28 entries Getala was declared the winner on the basis of the total time his models were in the air in the winning events.

Miss Betty McGuire is a guest for the week in the home of Miss Irene Hobout in Joliet.

The Frankfort-New Lenox 4-H club met Tuesday night in the home of Russel Lauffer. Plans were made for the county club picnic to be held in the Fred Francis woods July 22.

Thomas Carey, tax collector for New Lenox township will be at the New Lenox State Bank every day, this month except Thursdays when he will be at Sabin's store in Marley.

The King's Guards will meet at 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon in the League rooms of the M. E. church.

The official board of the M. E. church held a meeting at the parsonage Wednesday evening.

'Main Line,' Sole New England-New York Link in '88 Blizzard, Passes

W. H. Kavanaugh, right, now retired, was line foreman during construction of the "Main Line" in 1887. He is standing beside one of the original cedar poles. Foreman F. E. Maxtel, left, was in charge of dismantling the line.

One of the most historic telephone lines in the country recently passed into history.

It was known as the old Main Line and ran between New York and Boston. It was of open wire, and was the first toll line between those two cities.

Like Town's "Main Street" for this Main Line was well named, in the telephone world as Main Street is to every town which has such a thoroughfare. It was the great Number 1 route between most of New England and the outside world. Of late years its duties have been light. Recently some of it has been used for trunk lines between exchanges, and now it has been dismantled altogether.

In the old days the Boston terminus of the Main Line was in Bowdoin Square, just behind the old Revere House. This was located across the street from the site of the present Bowdoin Building of the New England Telephone and Telegraph Company. The line followed the route of the old Central Massachusetts Railroad to Bondsville, and then proceeded to Springfield. It was near Springfield that the last surviving segment of the original line was located, and now this segment has passed entirely out of the picture.

Had Many New Features

The toll line was constructed after its practicability had been demonstrated by an experimental circuit, and several of the poles which were set in the fall of 1887 still stand as testimony to the quality of workmanship which has always characterized telephone construction.

The building of this line was unique in another sense, in that it witnessed the application for the first time, of many methods of construction which have since become standard. It was the first line to employ cross arm braces to prevent the cross arms from getting out of alignment. It was the first line to carry copper wire, and it also carried ten pin cross arms and transposition brackets for the first time in telephone history. What is known as a number six iron wire was run along the tops of the poles, not only to strengthen the line but also for telegraph messages.

Withstood Famous Blizzard

Soon after its completion, the old Main Line had the opportunity of showing the stuff of which it was made, for the next year there came the noted blizzard of 1888 which has gone into the records as one of the most severe storms of all time. No better tribute to the work of the linemen on this historic line could be paid than the statement that the plant survived the test of the blizzard and for weeks it was the only means of communication between Boston and New York.

Nerves Do they torture you by day? Keep you awake at night? What is it that keeps hospitals open and doctors busy? NERVES. What is it that makes your face wrinkled and makes you feel old? NERVES. Nine times out of ten it's NERVES that make you restless, worried, haggard.

Nerves Do they make you Cranky, Blue—give you Nervous Indigestion, Nervous Headache? When nerves are over-taxed, you worry over trifles, find it hard to concentrate, can't sit still. Nerve Strain brings on Headache. Nervous people often suffer from Indigestion. There may be absolutely nothing wrong with the organs of digestion, but the Nerves are not on the job to make the organs do their work properly.

Nerves Do they interfere with your work; ruin your pleasure; drive away your friends? You're cheating yourself and the man who pays you if you work when your NERVES are not normal. You can't have a good time when you are nervous. You can't make or keep friends when you are keyed up and irritable. You may excuse yourself, but to others you are just a plain crank.

"Gas heat taught us something about living"

Anton Kohout, 1425 S. 59th Court,
Cicero, tells why he and his family are enthusiastic about Gas Heat

"I used to think," says Mr. Kohout, "that if you owned a home you had to clean up after soot and dirt, tramp up and down stairs early in the morning, late at night, to fix the furnace. But with gas heat we've changed our ideas."

No soot, no dirt, no furnace muss

More than 20,000 families in the Chicago-land area know that gas heat has brought pleasures and comforts to their homes never possible with their old heating systems. As Mr. Kohout says, "The house stays clean. The furnace never needs attention." Gas heat is clean heat. No soot, no dirt, no furnace muss. And no trouble, because a little thermostat on the wall regulates the temperature of your house.

Now—before you order your next winter's fuel supply, get the facts about gas heat. Remember, it costs you nothing for equipment to try gas heat. You try it for one month, two months, or a year before you decide. While you are trying it you pay only $3 a month rental during the heating months in the average home. This charge is included with the bill for the gas you use. If at any time within the year you decide you don't like gas heat we'll remove it and replace your former heating equipment in good workmanlike condition.

Order gas heat now

It will pay you to order gas heat now. Think of it. A clean basement all summer long. And next winter no coal shoveling, hauling ashes, getting up at daybreak to fix the fire.

Phone today for free estimate and full details of our startling offer.

With gas heat there is no dust, no soot. Mrs. Kohout, pointing to her curtains, says, "The house stays clean."

YOU INVEST NOTHING To Try Gas Heat

Gas heat can be installed without your investing one cent for equipment. We'll install it at our expense—remove it at our expense, if you don't like it. Accept this startling offer. Phone or write TODAY.

ORLAND PARK

ORLAND 4-H CLUB NEWS

The 4-H Club held its fourth meeting at the home of Albert Ihlenfeld Tuesday night July 10th. The Club now has 15 members which makes very active and interesting meetings.

The meeting was called to order and the members responded in the roll call with the names of his project. A price list of dairy feeds was passed out to the members having dairy projects. The members also discussed about the time of the show so as to prepare for it.

Owen Maue entertained with an interesting talk on the University of Illinois. He told how the freshmen were treated such as initiation and how they were looked upon as to be dumb. He told about the different types of courses and also how the students board there. He said there are good teachers and in spite of being a freshman, you really get along fine. His talk gave a very good idea of what college really is.

The president chose Erwin Yunker to give a talk for the next meeting. The members were also invited to have the next meeting at Chas. Erickson's place. Some of the members are planning on having a dairy judging team.

After the meeting refreshments were served by Mrs. Ihlenfeld. Arrian Yunker, Reporter.

Postmaster A. J. Toelle was taken ill last Thursday and has been confined to his home since. At latest reports he is somewhat improved.

C. F. Colecord expects to erect a filling station on his property at Alpine soon as the Southwest Highway is started.

The village board met Monday night and passed a resolution suspending the collection of a tax on ice cream parlors for the time being.

Fire Chief John Helenhouse was present and surprised the board by turning in a check for a fire call in Palos. As Palos has no fire protection the fire calls are answered by special arrangement with the Orland Fire Department and a charge is made for this service.

At the board meeting a tavern license was granted to Ray Ludwig. His place of business is located at Keane avenue and 143rd street. Orland Park now has five taverns.

A. C. Kay, local Wabash agent has received a number of bids for the old Wabash depot at Alpine. The building is to be sold to the highest bidder this week.

Miss McNash of Cleveland, Ohio has been a guest in the J. F. Schmadeke home this week.

Miss Lucille Schmadeke has returned from a visit in Indianapolis. The Royal Neighbors met Thursday in monthly session.

The monthly Child Welfare Clinic was held at the school Wednesday afternoon.

Mrs. Sherman Knox was hostess to the Orland buncos club Wednesday afternoon.

Albert Zenke has taken up a job with the forest preserve.

The Orland Park Legion Post met Tuesday night and made further plans for the big picnic they will sponsor in August.

The Condors of Chicago played the Orland Park team Sunday and defeated the latter.

Sunshine 4-H Club of Sedan Prairie

Mrs. Hilda Kampe, leader of the 4-H Club entertained the members at her home last Thursday. This was the fourth meeting of the club this year.

Mrs. Kampe explained various items of interest about the club project. Other new projects discussed were home canning and planning meals. A play was also brought up and discussed by the members.

The club is intending to have their social this week at the home of Mrs. Kampe.

All members were present at the meeting. Refreshments were served.

Soy Beans Used In
Manufacture of
Ford Automobiles

Hopeful farmers of America, eager to learn of a plan which holds promise of improving farm conditions of the last decade, are daily crowding the Ford Industrialized barn which forms part of the Ford exhibit at the Chicago World's Fair. An average of from eight to ten thousand view the barn daily, while a record crowd of more than 23,000 The attendance is made up of farmers anxious to discover how they can industrialize their farms, manufacturers inspecting the system which offers parts and materials at a much lower cost, and ordinary citizens desiring to keep abreast with the latest developments in farming and industry.

The industrialized barn was built by Henry Ford to demonstrate to farmers how they can not only raise raw materials for industry, but also do the initial processing on their farms. Thus the farmer can depend on the soil for his livelihood and on industry for the cash he needs. In this way he will have a double security.

Farm work is so divided that the rural citizen has a large amount of spare time in winter which he could utilize in manufacturing parts for industry. The equipment at the Ford barn is of a type that could be assembled by a farmer of mechanical bent at nominal cost. Most of the material in the machine devoted to the extraction of soy bean oil is standard piping, and while there are many parts which would have to be purchased, the cost would not be excessive, those in charge of the exhibit maintain. Power for running the machinery could be obtained from an ordinary tractor, although a steam engine is used at the Fair grounds.

Most of the farmers visiting the exhibit are definitely enthusiastic, according to the management of the exhibit, about Henry Ford's plan of subsistence farming. Shrewd questions involving problems such as cost of equipment and product, marketing, methods of production and other questions which pertain to the new plan indicate more than a passing interest.

A furniture manufacturer, upon learning that soy bean products could be made for him at a cost approximately 50 per cent less than that of his present materials, wanted to place an order immediately for accessories such as knobs, castors and other equipment amounting to $500,000. Because the company is not yet equipped to handle orders of this size, in addition to the other work for Ford cars, it was forced to decline the offer. The incident, however, they call indicative of the interest which has been aroused, and also of the possibilities which the idea contains.

The plan proposed by Henry Ford is frankly an experiment. It is an attempt to decentralize industry from the city and to establish thru-out America a nation of people both agricultural and industrial. Thus industry and agriculture would no longer be separate activities—each would be reciprocal, cooperative part of the nation's productive enterprise.

The selection of soy beans to illustrate what Henry Ford believes to be the solution of America's biggest problem was merely incidental. He says there are many other products of American farms which would be equally suitable, but the soy bean was chosen simply because of the simplicity and readiness of the demonstration and because it involves no problem that the ordinary farmer cannot master with his own means at hand.

There is abundant use for soy bean products in automobiles alone. Such products as iron buttons, enamel, steering wheels, gear shift knobs, distributor parts, timing gears and light switch assemblies are now being used in Ford cars, nearly a bushel of the beans being used in some form in each car.

Interest in the exhibit has been so strongly manifested that plans are now being considered by the Ford company to manufacture the equipment as soon as it is rendered fool-proof. When this is accomplished the machines will be sold to farmers at low cost.

Plans, details of which have not been announced, are being made for a special program in the Ford industrialized barn during Farm Week, which will be August 11-18, so that all rural visitors may have ample opportunity to take advantage of the economic aspects suggested by the exhibit.

Tomatoes
and Eggs

WHEN you put eggs with tomatoes, you get the glorious Spanish colors—yellow and red. But you get more than that, you get a combination of tastes which will titillate your tongue. Here are a couple of ways in which you can demonstrate this to yourself conclusively.

Baked Eggs en Casserole: Sauté one small diced onion in four tablespoons butter for a few minutes, then add three tablespoons flour, and stir smooth. Add the contents of a No. 2 can of tomatoes and cook until thick and creamy. Add one teaspoon salt and enough pepper and paprika to season. Hard-cook four eggs, peel and cut in halves. Put a little of the sauce in each of four individual baking dishes, lay two half eggs in each, and cover with the remaining sauce. Mix one-fourth cup crumbs with three tablespoons grated cheese, and sprinkle over the top. Bake until brown. Serves four.

This is Worth the Trouble
Stuffed Eggs in Holland: Hard-cook six small eggs, peel, cut in halves, remove yolks, mash and season with salt, paprika, mustard, lemon juice and mayonnaise. Refill whites and press two halves together with one canned anchovy curl in the center of each. Soften one tablespoon gelatin in two tablespoons cold water, and dissolve in boiling tomato juice from a 15-ounce can. Season to taste with salt, pepper, and Worcestershire sauce. Chill, and pour a little in the bottoms of six small molds. When hard, put a filled egg in each mold, and pour around the rest of the tomato juice. Chill until set. Unmold onto lettuce leaves, and garnish with mayonnaise. Serves six.*

The Many Uses Of Apple Sauce

HAVE you ever thought of the greatly varied possibilities of that can of apple sauce standing on your pantry shelf, or do you just open and serve it when you want to eat apple sauce? It tastes mighty good that way, but there are a dozen other ways in which it tastes equally good, or even better.

In crustades, for instance, or combined with tapioca or cider, in muffins and biscuits; in soup; in pies and tarts; in custards; in ices; in layer cake; or as part of a chicken stuffing. One housewife we know has thirty-five different recipes, each one of which calls for apple sauce as an ingredient.

We haven't space to give them all, but here is a selection to show some of the possibilities.

With Tapioca

Apple Tapioca Foam: Add three tablespoons minute tapioca to one cup boiling water, and cook in a double boiler until thick. Add two tablespoons sugar, one-third cup orange juice, and one tablespoon lemon juice, and continue cooking until tapioca is transparent. Add the contents of an 8-ounce can of apple sauce, chill and fold in one stiffly-beaten egg white. Chill and pile lightly in serving glasses. Top with whipped cream, if desired. Serves six.

Apple Ginger Tapioca: Add one-third cup minute tapioca to three cups boiling water, and let cook in a double boiler until transparent, stirring often. Add one-third cup sugar, one cup canned apple sauce, two tablespoons ginger syrup and one slightly-beaten egg yolk. Cook a few minutes more, cool slightly and add three tablespoons chopped preserved ginger and one stiffly-beaten egg white. Serve very cold with either plain or whipped cream. This makes eight servings.

With Cider

Frozen Apple Sauce and Cider: Dissolve one-fourth package lime gelatin in one-half cup boiling cider, and add one and one-half tablespoons sugar. Add one cup cold cider and the contents of an 8-ounce can of apple sauce. Freeze in refrigerator trays or in ice cream freezer. Do not freeze too hard. This is delicious served with duck. Serves eight.

Cider and Apple Ice: Mix together the contents of an 11-ounce can of apple sauce, two and a half cups cider, one-third cup sugar and two tablespoons lemon juice. Soak one teaspoon gelatin in four tablespoons cold water, then melt over hot water and add. Freeze mixture to a mush, add one beaten egg white and freeze hard. This is good with goose. Serves eight.

Muffins and Biscuits

Apple and Date Muffins: Beat two eggs and add one cup milk. Sift together two cups flour, three tablespoons sugar, four teaspoons baking powder and one-half teaspoon salt, and add. Then add one-half cup canned apple sauce and three tablespoons melted butter. Add one-half cup chopped dates, and pour into buttered muffin tins. Bake from fifteen to twenty minutes in a hot oven, 400 degrees. This makes eight or ten muffins.

Apple Cheese Biscuits: Mix and sift two cups flour, four teaspoons baking powder, one-half teaspoon soda and one teaspoon salt. Cut in three tablespoons shortening, and add one beaten egg, one-half cup canned apple sauce and one-fourth cup thick sour milk mixed together. Pat out on a floured board, cut into small biscuits and place in pans. Sprinkle with grated cheese, and bake in a hot oven, 400 degrees, for from ten to twelve minutes. This makes about sixteen medium sized biscuits.

Soup and Salad

Spiced Apple Soup: Cook together gently the contents of a No. 2 can of apple sauce, two and a half cups water, one tablespoon brown sugar, ten whole cloves, a stick of cinnamon, two tablespoons raisins and half a sliced lemon until the raisins are puffy and the lemon rind tender. Chill. Serve with a slice of the lemon and a seedless raisin garnishing each cup. Serves eight.

Apple Ale Salad: Soak two tablespoons gelatin in one-fourth cup cold water five minutes, then dissolve in one-half cup boiling water. Add one-third cup sugar, three tablespoons lemon juice, three tablespoons orange juice and one and a half cups ginger-ale. Add one and a half cups canned apple sauce. When about to set, add one-half cup chopped blanched almonds, pour into small wet molds, and chill. Serve very cold on lettuce with cream mayonnaise. Serves eight.*

SYNOPSIS

Seeking death by throwing herself from Lone Mesa, to escape dishonor at the hands of a drunken desperado, Sonya Savarin allows herself to be rescued by her suddenly repentant attacker. The girl is a self-appointed physician to the Navajo Indians, living on an Arizona sheep ranch with her brother Serge, his wife, Lila, and their small daughter, Babs. She is engaged to Rodney Blake, wealthy New Yorker, but her heart is with the friendless Navajos and she evades a wedding. Sonya pulls Little Moon, wife of Two Fingers, a Navajo, through the crisis of an illness. Two Fingers is deeply grateful. Blake returns to New York, declaring he will give Sonya six more months and then demand she keep her promise to marry him. Sonya again meets the man whose advances she had repulsed on Lone Mesa. He tells her he bitterly regrets his action. Sonya is affected, but unforgiving. She hears rumors of a Border bandit "El Capitan Diablo," and vaguely connects him with her attacker. On Lone Mesa she again comes upon the strange young man, but she no longer fears him.

"I'd lose my right hand if it would help," he said doggedly, looking down and fiddling with his latigo. The golden horse turned a loving head and rubbed it gently along his arm.

"H'm," said the girl through her nostrils, a sharp and cynical sound.

"I would," he repeated, "an' all you've got to do is set a mark to prove it. Is there anything—any single thing that a man can do to prove his word? Tell me, and I'll do it."

"Who is the bandit across the Border who crucifies his double-crossers?" cried Sonya like a shot and gasped at the sound of her own words. It seemed as if another person spoke them, so wholly unintentional had they been.

The man's eyes flashed up to hers, and once again they were wild as any hawk's, the black of the pupils spreading over the blue of the irises. Slowly the color drained from his face, leaving it ash white beneath its bronze, the lips pale as blue milk.

"Good G—d!" he said and was silent.

The girl was silent, too, and for the first time she felt a flash of fear, as if she had set in motion sinister forces of which she knew nothing. They stared at each other for a moment aghast at this thing which had sprung between them, stark and terrible, and then Sonya flicked her rein, moved in her saddle recovering. She knew she had touched disaster too deep for a woman's hand, and she drew back instinctively.

"No," she said swiftly, "don't answer. I shouldn't have asked. And it's no proof, anyway. I don't want proof. What's past is past. I take your word."

The man wet his stiff lips.

"You do? Do you believe what I've been trying to tell you ever since that day—that I could kill myself for what I did? Do you believe me?"

"Yes," said Sonya. "Not that it matters, but I do."

He took out a white handkerchief and wiped his face, which was sweating in the high cool wind.

"No," he said unsteadily, "not that it matters—to you. But it does to me. Why, I don't know, but it does. More than anything has ever mattered in my whole d—d life—I beg your pardon!"

"Granted," said the girl. "Serge swears."

"Serge?"

"My brother."

"Well, it matters, and I've spent hours alone up here and other places wondering about it and why it does. I've known women all my life, in several countries, and never a one that stayed in my mind a week after I left her. I'm a bad lot, as I told you before, and it don't mean a great deal what I think, one way or another, only I ain't ever felt so sorry in all my days over anything. I was just wondering, when you rode around th' wall yonder."

Sonya regarded him steadily.

"It does matter," she said, "what anyone thinks and does. No man lives to himself alone, as the Good Book says. To every man his place and a certain amount of influence. And to every man his responsibility, too, for that influence. You've got influence, somewhere for something."

He stirred uneasily, moved on his booted feet, felt in his pocket for a fresh cigarette.

"And something's changing in you," the girl went on, "there's been a change in you since—the first time I saw you. In your face, in your speech. You're using more 'g's on the end of your words, for one thing, and your eyes are different."

"If they weren't when I look at you, I'd be lower than I am, and that's plenty low."

"Granted again," said Sonya calmly and watched the slow tide of red that swept up over his pale cheeks. "But the very fact of change outwardly argues change inwardly. I'd trust you now a considerable way."

He drew a long breath of fragrant smoke and, turning away, looked out over the spread of desert shimmering under the early afternoon sun.

When he turned back to her, Sonya was shocked at the look on his handsome face, a sunken look, haggard, as if some cruel vise of the spirit had suddenly been set upon it. He smiled, for the first time in her experience of him, and something leaped in Sonya's heart like a captive bird struggling to be free.

"Miss Savarin," he said, "that's the sweetest and the cruellest thing you ever said in your life. It's a dangerous thing, too—for me. Yet I'm glad you said it. It'll be something—something to remember among worse memories. And now I'll be getting along. Please come here whenever you want to. Lone Mesa is yours from now on."

He swung into his saddle, and the girl put out a quick hand and caught his sleeve.

"No," she said swiftly, "why should you give it up? There's something here for you, something good, I know. It's in your eyes when you look out yonder, a peace and a healing, and I want you to have that. You need it. It—it's something of the—of the soul, if you see what I mean."

Gravely he looked at her, shook his head wonderingly.

"My G—d!" he said softly. "What a woman you are! I didn't know there was one like you outside of th' story books! Are you, by any chance, a lady preacher?"

"No," said Sonya, "of course not. I'm a physician. But I'm a woman first, and I can see when a heart's sick as well as a body. You're sick in your soul, your character, or I miss my guess—and I usually don't do that."

"No," he said, "you haven't now. But it don't matter in this case. It's too late for medicine—even yours."

"It's not," said Sonya, and was astonished at the passion of her tone;

"I Am Hosteen Nez," He Said Presently, "and She Is Cactus Flower."

"It's never too late. Not till one's last heartbeat—only then."

"What are you tryin' to do?" he asked her gently, smiling into her eyes again—"change th' spots of th' leopard? Be careful. There's no more treacherous beast alive. An' I'm telling you true, Miss Savarin. I'm a leopard at heart, cruel and fierce, and not fit for you to speak to like this, straight out, man to man. I don't deserve it. If you knew what an' who I am you'd turn your horse an' ride for that down trail like, all possessed, and you'd be right."

"Maybe I do know—a little," Sonya flashed, "but I'm not afraid. I'm never afraid, of anything."

"No. You're like a white angel in armor," he said gravely: "you haven't any need to fear. Even I could not hurt you when I wanted to. You're safe—anywhere—any time. Th' devil himself couldn't hurt you."

"Will you remember what I say—that it's never too late to change?"

"I'll remember," he said politely, "an' thanks. Now, good-by, and good luck always, Miss Savarin."

"Good-by," said Sonya, "and the same to you."

He carried his hat in his hand as he whirled the horse away around the corner of the ancient stone house, and did not look back, and Sonya listened to the shod hoofs striking into the defile that led down the face of the sheer cliff.

She sat stiffly quiet in her saddle and was conscious of a strange tumult within her spirit. What had she done, talking here in this high solitude with this mysterious rider whose inner self was black with unnamed sins—whose very presence in the land was a menace and a portent of disaster? For she knew past all doubting that this was the Blue-eyed One of whom the Servant spoke in his vague parables, that henchman of Beelzebub who went before trouble. And she who owed him hatred, who had vowed to take her pound of flesh from him because of what he had tried to do that day at the mesa's rim! She had talked with him, earnestly, and without scorn!

The soft blue veils of twilight were beginning to trail along the desert's face before she roused herself and went down the steep declivity for home.

The next day she went to see Little Moon and refused the bundle of sheep pelts which Two Fingers offered her, along with the gorgeous finished blanket which the woman laid across her knees.

Sonya stroked the latter with appreciative fingers but shook her head, smiling.

"What I did for you," she told them in Navajo, "was a giving—a service to my people. You are my people. I have chosen the Navajos before the Great Spirit. Let be. It is well."

After a long silence Two Fingers said, "It is well. And we and all the Navajos around here are your little people, under your feet. A soft blanket to keep your heels from the stones."

"It is very well," the girl said gravely and knew he spoke the truth. There was to come a day when she would have ample and tragic proof of that, but it was just as well she could not see ahead.

From Chee wash she rode down along the levels of the sage to where the debouching canyon had given up its pitiful small caravan that day she had seen Mr. Satter from the school taking away the children.

On an impulse she turned and rode into this rugged cut that bisected the rising land. She rounded a far-in turn and came upon a habitation. There was no sign of life about it, though it bore evidence of occupation within the hour—a matate damp from the recent mixing of meal, a tiny fire on the sand. For a time she sat her horse and contemplated it—a good hogan set against the canyon's wall. There was little sign of prosperity. No rug bloomed on its hand made loom, the hogan was bare of comforts, the beds on its floor being thin and scant. Evidently these Indians were very poor.

She did not call or move about, but sat still in her saddle, waiting, and presently her patience was rewarded, for a soft step sounded behind her and she turned to see the wild buck, the squaw, and the littlest child of that pitiful drama in which she had participated.

She smiled at them, and when Sonya Savarin smiled, a window of her soul opened and disclosed a light. The family came carefully up to her.

"I come to see if all is well with you and yours," she told the man in Navajo.

"It is well with this one," he replied, touching the child, "but not with this one," touching the mother. "Her heart runs away in water, and she does not eat."

And looking closer Sonya saw in astonished sorrow that it was so indeed. The woman, who had been plump and hale some weeks back, was now a scarecrow, her old velvet jacket hanging loose on her form, her tragic eyes sunk in hollows. Her brown lips looked dry and hard.

For a moment the girl felt such a revulsion against the whole white race as to give her an actual nausea. Her hands ached to get hold of Satter's fat neck for one good minute.

"So," she said, "I see. Have you told her that the little ones will be coming home soon? Did the agent tell you when to go after them?"

"No," said the man, "and I do not know where to go."

"Oh," said Sonya under her breath, "the dirty beast!"

Aloud she said slowly, "Well, you tell her to look up to the east and before many days she will see her children coming. What is your name, Hosteen?"

The man hesitated, since the naming of one's own name is not good, but this was a desperate matter.

"I am Hosteen Nez," he said presently, "and she is Cactus Flower."

"And I am Sonya—Doctor Sonya—from down on the desert beyond Lone Mesa, and I will see the man who took the children. Maybe four sleeps, maybe five. You tell her eat and get strong."

"I will tell her," said Hosteen Nez, and his eyes looked so deep into Sonya's that the girl's heart hurt with their probing.

"I will come again," she said and, turning Darkness, went back down the great cut of Blue Sand canyon as she had come.

That night, talking with Serge and Lila in the twilight patio with Babs asleep on her lap, she protested passionately against the treatment of the Indians by the whites in authority.

Serge smoked in silence, his dark eyes gazing out along the gray sage stretches that were turning purple in the falling shadows.

"Kid," he said presently, "you're the best little scout ever, but I'm afraid that some day you're going to get yourself into a peck of trouble, messing in where you don't belong."

"Messing in where I don't belong!" cried the girl hotly. "Do you call helping that mother get her young ones back for the summer vacation messing in, when she's actually grieving herself to death in her ignorance and fear? Suppose it were Lila and Babs, for instance?"

Serge moved uneasily, knocked out the dottle of his pipe.

"Well, of course—"

"Yes, of course! That's it. That's always it from the white man's viewpoint. Well, old dear, you can just hold yourself in readiness to bail me out of jail, for I may need it. I'm going over to that school and get those youngsters and take them back to that hogan, if it's the last thing I do. School is already out for the season, and that fat Satter hasn't taken the trouble to return them or to even tell the father where to come for them. Can you beat that for sheer downright meanness? If you don't need the car, I'll take it and go over to the school sometime this week—maybe day after tomorrow. O. K., Serge?"

"O. K., honey. I'll begin looking round for ball in the meantime in case you find something you can use as an excuse to hop the school authorities."

GOD'S CARE FOR ELIJAH

LESSON TEXT—I Kings 17:1-16;
19:1-8.

GOLDEN TEXT—For after all these things do the Gentiles seek: for your heavenly Father knoweth that ye have need of all these things. Matthew 6:32.

PRIMARY TOPIC—How God Took Care of Elijah.

JUNIOR TOPIC—How God Took Care of Elijah.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How Does God Provide?

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—God's Constant Care.

I. Elijah's Message to Ahab (v. 1). This was a most startling message, for Ahab had not only led Israel into idolatry but into the repudiation of the living God.

1. "As the Lord God of Israel liveth," Elijah knew that he represented the living God when he came into the king's presence.

2. "Before whom I stand." Because Elijah stood before God he could stand before Ahab.

3. "There shall not be dew nor rain these years but according to my word." The suspension of moisture continued for three and a half years and was given in answer to Elijah's prayer (James 5:17). Drought was predicted as a punishment for idolatry (Deut. 11:16, 17) and the prophet was now applying the divine judgment.

II. Elijah's Retirement (vv. 2, 3).

As soon as he had delivered his message he retired from the king's side while the penalty of the king's sin should be visited upon the land. Though God's prophets must be separated from men they are in God's presence.

III. God Provides for Elijah (vv. 2-16; 19:1-8).

1. At the brook Cherith (vv. 2-7). God offered a hiding place for his servant who so fearlessly declared his message. He was sustained in a twofold way.

a. By drinking of the brook (vv. 4-6). While drinking of the literal water of the brook he was being nourished by the living water from the throne of God.

b. By being fed by the ravens (vv. 4-6). The ravens brought him bread and flesh both morning and evening. Elijah thus enjoyed two meals each day with water to drink. The same God who sustained Elijah still lives and we should trust him for our daily bread. At last the brook dried up because there was no rain in the land. The Lord then instructed him to move.

2. At Zarephath (vv. 8-16). Observe

a. The place (v. 9) Zarephath was at the west side of Palestine near the Mediterranean sea in Gentile territory. In order to reach this place Elijah had to cross the country from the Jordan to the sea. Perhaps he did this at night in order not to be seen. Zarephath was only a few miles from the home of Jezebel's father.

b. Sustained by a widow (vv. 10-12). "Bring a little water and a morsel of bread," was the request which he made of the widow. This was a great trial to her but God had touched her heart and stirred up faith in her. Her reply reveals her deep distress.

c. Elijah's reply (v. 13). This made plain to her that it was a case of mutual interest to do as the prophet said. "The barrel of meal shall not waste, neither shall the cruse of oil fail." May we learn from Elijah's experience.

(1) The particularity of God's providence. He by prearrangement meets our daily needs. There are no happenings in God's providence. The woman of Zarephath going out to gather sticks to prepare the last meal met Elijah and is helped for two years.

(2) No matter how small our resources we can do something for God if we will. Let no one be discouraged because he is poor and unknown.

(3) We should give our all to God and trust him for further supply. The best way to help ourselves is to help others. This woman gave one morsel to God's prophet and obtained a supply for herself and family for two or more years.

(4) God often allows us to get down to great extremity in order to teach us that all is from him.

(5) God's dealing with this Gentile woman is a foregleam of his dealing with the Gentile nations.

IV. He Sent an Angel to Cook Elijah's Meal (I Kings 19:3,7).

Elijah was greatly discouraged and despondent over the strain of his struggle which culminated on Mt. Carmel. God was very tender in his dealing with him. He not only gave him sleep (v. 5) but provided food for him at the hand of an angel.

Difficulties

Difficulties are here not to be stepped, but to be met fairly and squarely. A religion that doesn't get you into trouble isn't worth having, and a religion that doesn't get you out of trouble isn't worth having. Remember Daniel and his three friends.—E. G. Krampe.

Find Happiness in Contentment

Great Philosopher Right in His Summing Up of Life's Joys.

"To think I used to complain of monotony and boredom in our suburban life! Why, my idea of heaven now would be just having things back to what they used to be!"

The woman who said that was one of a group who had little to worry about except the shortcomings of suburban life—until a series of events which began with a bank failure and a scandal touched the lives of all of them.

The turn of a week had left her father impoverished, her best friend's husband a suicide, another friend with grounds for divorce. No wonder her idea of happiness now was not something new, not more excitement, but "just having things back to what they used to be!"

"I'm getting to be like my grandmother," she added. "All she ever wanted out of life was just to go on without getting a telegram."

And many of us will agree that her grandmother had the right idea. The more we see of life and of people, the more likely we are to come to the conclusion that the nearest approach to happiness is found in peace and contentment. Those who struggle restlessly for something they have not got are usually found, on achieving that, to be just as restlessly struggling for something else again. And it is doubtful if they ever get as near to happiness, or give as much happiness, as those who are content to "pursue the even tenor of their way," liking what they have, and therefore having what they like. There is a limit, of course, beyond which content may become stagnation, but as we look about us the dangers we see are usually of the other extreme, the discontent of people with what they have, the restlessness which distorts their sense of values, the fear of boredom which enslaves them to empty excitements that can give no real joy or lasting satisfaction.

The great philosopher, Shopenhauer, seems to have seen eye to eye with the grandmother who wanted merely to go on without receiving bad news. These are his words:

"The happiest lot is not to have experienced the keenest delights or the greatest pleasure, but to have brought life to a close without any very great pain."

New Meter Shows Just How to Set Carburetor

No longer need the carburetor of your automobile be a mystery, says the Scientific American. A newly perfected meter will promptly tell you exactly how to adjust the needle valve to give the most efficient "mixture."

More accurate than the most experienced repair man, this air-fuel meter registers with scientific exactness just how much too rich or too lean the carburetor mixture is. Of course, the average automobile owner will hardly have sufficient use for such an instrument to bother about it, but operators of fleets of trucks are already finding that exact adjustment of carburetors of their motors gives them appreciable savings in their large fuel bills.

The new meter, developed in Newark, N. J., is operated by passing a portion of the exhaust gas through the meter after the motor has warmed up. When this exhaust gas reaches the analysis cell of the instrument, a pointer is deflected over a wide scale to indicate the exact nature of the mixture.

The meter operates on the Wheatstone bridge principle, comparing the thermal conductivity of the exhaust gas and the air-fuel ratio of the carburetor. The scale of the meter is calibrated directly in pounds of air per pounds of gasoline burned.

MAKES RADIO OF HUMAN BODY BY THOUGHT WAVES

People thousands of miles apart may shortly be able to communicate with one another by means of thought waves, according to Professor Callegaris, an Italian mental specialist.

He says there are three "communicating discs" in the human body—one on the right side of the neck, one behind the index finger of the right hand. A search for these "discs" was first made in 1908 by the late Professor Mingazzini, but he died before he reached the stage of actual tests, and Professor Callegaris promised to continue the research.

In one of his experiments, two nurses were blindfolded and seated ten feet apart, facing each other. A small capsule of aluminum was placed on each nurse's neck at the spot where the human receiving and transmitting apparatus is supposed to be situated. One of the nurses was asked to transmit her thoughts on a subject in which both were interested, and the other to try to receive the message.

After a while, the nurse who was acting as receiver stated that she felt sharp, burning sensations on the tip of her tongue, pains on both cheeks and the left wrist, also a peculiar feeling of heaviness on top of her head and "emptiness" at the lower part of the brain. Presently she stated that she could see a network of white radiations, undulating like the waves of the sea, all round the body of the other nurse. She then said that the other nurse was telling her about one of the patients in the hospital, mentioning his name and describing his symptoms. The nurse who "transmitted" the message agreed that this was correct.

News and the Bigness Thereof

"What is your idea of big news?" "Anything I happen to be interested in," answered Senator Sorghum, "that manages somehow to break into the headlines."

OPERATOR'S QUICK ACTION FOILS ROBBERY OF BANK

A telephone operator at Starbuck, Minn., became a local heroine recently when she helped to thwart a bank robbery. The operator, Miss Florence Bulman, was passing the First National Bank when she saw two employees and two patrons held at bay by one robber, while his companion stood guard at the door. Flourishing a pistol, the latter ordered the operator into the bank. Instead, she darted across the street and warned the proprietor of a restaurant. A few moments later, when the robbers left the bank, the restaurant proprietor fatally wounded one of them, who dropped the loot. His accomplice escaped.

LONDON CONFEREES PLACED MANY OVERSEAS CALLS

The World Economic Conference in London last June set a new record for international telephone calls. The delegates of only two countries, Japan and China, were unable to telephone their home governments.

She Goes Fishing, After 45 Years in Business

MISS ESTELLE MCGRAW

Miss Estelle McGraw recently retired from the employ of the Michigan Bell Telephone Company with the longest record of telephone service ever attained by a Michigan woman. She became an operator on July 5, 1887, when Detroit had only twenty telephone girls, and she was the youngest of the lot.

At that time, only 1,700 persons in the city had telephones, and during those early years her experience included local and long distance operating, collections, waiting on customers at the counter, and making herself generally useful. For the past 30 years she had filled an important place in the Michigan Bell Telephone Company's directory department, and for ten years had been in charge of the compilation of all of the company's telephone directories except the Detroit book.

The first thing she did upon her retirement was to go to Northern Michigan on a trout fishing trip.

TINLEY PARK

Last Saturday Judge Clyde Rice performed a wedding ceremony at his home, the couple being from the South Elmore Subdivision.

The Ladies Aid of the Zion Lutheran church held their monthly session Wednesday afternoon.

The drive to collect delinquent water tax has been successful. A few water users were shut off.

Miss Bernetta Wannemacher and Miss Bernice Vogt left Wednesday night on a vacation trip to North Dakota where they will visit the Peter Wannemacher and Wm. Vogt families.

Edward Teska and family who have been visiting here, with the former's mother and other relatives, returned Monday to their home in Welcome, Minn.

Bruce Campbell and family left Thursday on a motor trip to Tenn. The Tinley Park Firemen will attend a firemen's meeting at Steger next Monday night.

A dance will be held at the Saenger hall every Wednesday night beginning July 18th. Everyone invited.

Mrs. Marshmer, son and daughter of Milwaukee will be guests of Christ Meyer next week.

J. C. Funk, son Robert, Harry Mager and son played golf at the Woodruff Golf Course near Joliet Sunday morning.

George Schreiber is enjoying a week's vacation with relatives in Michigan.

Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Detwiler are expected back from their wedding trip this week.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Funk attended the World's Fair Sunday afternoon.

Mrs. Wm. Byrd, a former Tinley resident, now of Kinsman, Illinois, has been a guest in the Wilke home the past week.

News has been received from Mrs. Holwedell that she and daughter have arrived safely in Germany and enjoyed their ocean voyage on the great liner Europa very much.

Engineers Look

Over Prospective
Oil Well Sites

Last week Joseph McGlashen of Chicago and six engineers called in Frankfort and Green Garden townships and looked over the sites where they propose to drill for oil. The engineers had their instruments with them and were firm in their belief that oil exists in this section. They expect to start oil drilling operation soon but have not indicated where the first oil well is to be sunk.

Practically all the oil leases have been signed up.

MOST TELEPHONES PER CAPITA IN COAST CITY

San Francisco Leads in Number
Per 100 Population

San Francisco ranks first among the large cities of the United States in telephone development.

At the beginning of the present year San Francisco had more telephones per population than any other large American city, with 36.5 instruments per hundred people. Next came Pasadena with 35 per cent, and Washington, D. C., with 33.3 per cent.

Atlantic City occupies fourth place, with 32.9 per cent, due to its many large hotels with telephones in every room. Madison, Wis., Evanston, Ill., Denver, Colo., New Rochelle N. Y., and Lincoln, Neb., follow in the order named, and then Mt. Vernon, N. Y., Los Angeles, Cal., Cedar Rapids, Ia., Omaha, Neb., Oakland, Cal. Des Moines Ia., and Seattle, Wash.

First in Residence Telephones

New Rochelle, N. Y., ranking in eighth position by total number of telephones per population, occupies first place if ranked by the number of residence telephones per 100 families. On the same basis, Evanston ranks second, Pasadena third, and Mt. Vernon fourth, while San Francisco would be in ninth place.

Home Telephones Lead

New York City ranks thirty-first on the basis of telephones per 100 population, while Chicago ranks twenty-seventh and Boston thirty-sixth. In New York the number of business telephones is greater than the number of residence telephones, but in Chicago and Boston residence telephones lead. Residence telephones also lead in such cities as San Francisco, Los Angeles, Washington, and, in fact, in most of the larger cities.

Self-Knowledge

A well-known clergyman says every man should keep a diary so that he may know himself. The average man knows himself well enough to be certain that if he started a diary he wouldn't keep it up.

Avoid Disappointing It

"The immoderate use of chewing gum may lead to stomach disorders," says a physician. This is easily understandable. When the jaws begin to work the stomach naturally looks for something to come down, and gets peeved if it doesn't.—Boston Transcript.
